Mikhail Bakhtin and Biblical Scholarship
An Introduction
Barbara Green

Mikhail Bakhtin has been hailed as a creative and prolific thinker whose aesthetics and ethics are valuable for biblical studies. The use of Bakhtin in the biblical field is just beginning; since his ideas are not easy to appropriate, this introduction is timely and helpful. The volume situates Bakhtin as a theorist, suggests his most likely contribution to biblical studies, summarizes his interlinked strategies, and demonstrates a particular use of his ideas in interpreting a portion of 1 Samuel. This book will appeal to those with an interest in literary theory, those looking for a coherent methodology for aesthetic works in general, and those trying to situate current trends in biblical scholarship.

PAUL AND THE STOICS

Troels Engberg-Pedersen

In this first comprehensive analysis of Paul's relationship to Stoic philosophy, Engberg-Pedersen shows how reading the epistles in the light of the ancient Stoics allows for a more accurate interpretation of those letters.

"Engberg-Pedersen's interpretation of Paul is likely to be the most important since Rudolph Bultmann's, and has a strong claim to being not only coherent and exegetically sensitive, but also historically plausible."
—Stanley Stowers, Brown University
